UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

Spreckels Sugar Company, Inc.,
Plaintiff,
v.
United Food and Commercial Workers,
Local 135, AFL-CIO, CLC,
Defendant.

Case No.: 23CV413GPC(KSC)

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF’S “EMERGENCY MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION”

[Dkt. No. 4.]

On March 6, 2023, Plaintiff filed a complaint under Section 301(a) of the Labor Management Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 185(a), and an “emergency preliminary injunction”¹ enjoining Defendant from striking as threatened on March 7, 2023. (Dkt. Nos. 1, 4.) At the hearing, the Court was informed that a strike commenced on March 9, 2023. Pursuant to the Court’s briefing schedule, Defendant filed an opposition on March

¹ By filing an “emergency motion for preliminary injunction”, it is not clear whether Plaintiff is seeking an “ex parte motion for temporary restraining order” or an expedited “motion for preliminary injunction.” Nonetheless, the Court construes the “emergency preliminary injunction” as an ex parte motion for temporary restraining order and disregards the procedural defect due to the urgent nature of the issue. In future filings, Plaintiff must strictly comply with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, this district’s civil local rules and the undersigned chambers rules.

1 8, 2023. Late on March 8, 2023, Plaintiff filed a reply.² (Dkt. No. 14.) A hearing was 2 held on March 10, 2023. (Dkt. No. 15.) The Court ordered supplemental briefing which 3 was filed on March 11, 2023.³ (Dkt. Nos. 17,18.) Based on the reasoning below, the 4 Court DENIES Plaintiff’s “emergency motion for preliminary injunction.”

5 Background

6 Plaintiff Spreckels Sugar Company, Inc. (“Plaintiff”) is an employer as that term is 7 defined under the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947. (Dkt. No. 1, Compl. ¶ 3.)
8 Defendant United Food and Commercial Workers, Local 135, AFL-CIO, CLC is a 9 voluntary, unincorporated association doing business as a labor organization under 20 10 U.S.C. § 185. (Id. ¶ 4.) Defendant, acting as a labor organization, represents certain 11 Spreckels employees at its Brawley factory and outside receiving station serving the 12 Brawley factory. (Id.) Defendant is the collective bargaining representative for these 13 employees and is covered by the parties’ collective bargaining agreement (“CBA”) 14 effective January 1, 2022 to January 5, 2025. (Id.; Dkt. No. 1-2, Compl., Ex. A.)

15 In 2021, as part of the CBA negotiations, Plaintiff proposed to terminate the 16 defined benefit pension plan and replace it with a 401(k) retirement plan, provided 17 information and examples showing the estimated total value of certain employees’ 18 retirement benefits under the pension plan and informed that if there is a transition to a 19 401(k) plan, employees would get the option to receive the balance of their defined 20 benefit retirement benefits as a direct cash payment or to roll over the balance to an 21 individual retirement account. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 5.) Defendant agreed to 22 the proposal. (Id. ¶ 6.)

24
25
26 ² Plaintiff filed an ex parte request for leave to file a reply which the Court granted. (Dkt. Nos. 12, 13.)

27 ³ On March 13, 2023, without leave of Court, Plaintiff filed a notice of supplemental authority. (Dkt.
28 No. 19.) Nonetheless, the Court notes that the two district court cases pre-date Buffalo Forge Co. v. United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO, 428 U.S. 397, 408 (1976), and does not alter the Court’s ruling in this case.

1 SECTION 15—PENSION PLAN of the CBA provides: “[e]ffective December 31, 2 2021, the pension plan froze and will move to termination. In place of the pension plan is 3 an enhanced 401(k) for year-round employees. See Section 16.16 for specifics.” (Dkt.
4 No. 1-2, Compl., Ex. A.) In turn, SECTION 16.16 -- 401(K) PLAN provides,

5 The Employer will make available a 401(k) Plan for its year-round-6 employees with the employer providing an automatic three percent (3%) 7 contribution plus a fifty percent (50%) match up to an employee’s six 8 percent (6%) contribution. The employer will provide this benefit for six (6) 9 years, through December 31, 2027. The cost of establishing and administering the Plan shall be paid for by the Employer. The Plan shall be funded solely by contributions of the participants.

11 (Id.)

12 According to Defendant, Plaintiff began the process of terminating the pension 13 plan in January 2022 with the Internal Revenue Service approving the plan termination in 14 July 2022. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 7.) However, Plaintiff did not send out the 15 required “Notice of Plan Benefit” to employees until October 2022. (Id.) Since October 16 2022, represented employees received three updated estimates of the worth of their 17 defined benefit retirement but the amount of each estimate was lower than the previous 18 ones totaling about $10,000-$30,000 less than the value in 2021. (Id.) After consulting 19 with its pension consultant, Defendant learned that Plaintiff had delayed termination of 20 the pension and if it had terminated the pension more promptly, even by a few months, 21 the decrease in the worth of each employee’s benefit would have been less. (Id. ¶ 8.) 22 Further, according to Defendant, Plaintiff used some liberties that had not been 23 negotiated in terminating the pension plan such as not using an early retirement 24 adjustment in calculating the lump sum worth of employees’ retirement benefit as it often 25 increases the worth of the benefit. (Id.)

26 Defendant sought information from Plaintiff about the plan termination and after 27 communications and receipt of information from Plaintiff, on January 25, 2023, 28 Defendant requested to bargain over the effects of the pension termination. (Id. ¶ 9, 11;

1 Dkt. No. 7-3, Ex. A.) In response, Plaintiff stated that while it was not legally obligated 2 to engage in further effects bargaining because the pension plan termination had already 3 been negotiated, and any request was untimely, it was open to “reengage in effects 4 bargaining” in order to further “collaborative labor relations.” (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters 5 Decl. ¶¶ 11-12; Dkt. No. 7-3, Ex. A; Dkt. No. 7-4, Ex. B.)

6 On February 13, 2023, Plaintiff and Defendant commenced effects bargaining over 7 the pension plan termination and exchanged information. (Dkt. No. 1, Compl. ¶ 10.) At 8 the meeting, Defendant states it made a specific proposal to resolve its concerns about 9 how Plaintiff proceeded to terminate the pension plan as well as asked questions about 10 how the pension plan was terminated. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 13.) On February 11 17, 2023, Plaintiffs provided a written response to Defendant’s questions but did not 12 respond to the Union’s proposal or explain the delay. (Dkt. No. 7-5, Ex. C.)

13 Due to the repeated lack of response to Defendant’s concerns about the process
14 Plaintiff used to terminate the pension plan, it filed an unfair labor practice (“ULP”)
15 charge with the National Labor Relations Board (“NLRB”) around February 22, 2023 16 alleging Plaintiff failed to negotiate in good faith. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 15; Dkt.
17 No. 7-6, Ex. D.) According to Defendant, ULP concerns Plaintiff’s conduct in its 18 underlying negotiations and discussions about the termination of the defined benefit 19 pension plan and does not relate to the terms of the CBA regarding the employer’s intent 20 to terminate the plan and description of the 401(k) plan. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 21 16.) Defendant does not believe that the underlying dispute is subject to the CBA and 22 has not filed a grievance related to the pension plan dispute. (Id.)

23 Defendant informed employees about the ULP and coordinated a “strike vote” on 24 March 1, 2023 where the employees voted in favor of an unfair labor practice strike to 25 start on March 6, 2023. (Id. ¶ 18; Dkt. No. 1, Compl. ¶ 11.) Prior to the strike vote, 26 around February 24, 2023, Plaintiff distributed and required employees to sign a 27 “Frequently Asked Questions” (“FAQ”) document stating that “(1) there is a no-strike 28 clause in the collective bargaining agreement, (2) if the Union calls a strike, it will be

1 violating the collective bargaining agreement, and (3) the no-strike clause prohibits 2 employees from striking, without any caveats.” (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 19; Dkt.
3 No. 7-7, Ex. E.) Defendant then filed another ULP charge with the NLRB charging that 4 Plaintiff’s FAQ interferes with the employees’ right to engage in a ULP strike. (Dkt. No.
5 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 19; Dkt. No. 7-8, Ex. F.)

6 SECTION 16.9 – STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS of the CBA provides “[d]uring the 7 term of this Agreement, there shall be no cessation[,] interruption or delay of work or 8 other action by the employees or the Union which impairs the Employer’s operations or 9 financial condition or affects the distribution of its products, including without limitation, 10 strikes (including sympathy strikes), work stoppages, slowdowns, picketing boycotts, or 11 corporate campaigns. During the term of this Agreement there shall be no lockout by the 12 Employer.” (Dkt. No. 1-2, Ex. A at 28.)

13 Initially, Defendant informed its employees that it would sanction a ULP strike on 14 Monday, March 6, 2023; however, when Plaintiff agreed to bargain with it on March 6, 15 2023, Defendant agreed to delay the strike. (Dkt. No. 1, Compl. ¶ 14; Dkt. No. 1-5, 16 Compl., Exs. D, E; Dkt. No. 7-1, Walters Decl. ¶ 20.) The parties engaged in bargaining
17 sessions on March 6, and 8, 2023 without a resolution, and because there was no 18 agreement, Defendant said it intended to strike on March 9, 2023. (Dkt. No. 14-1, Cecere 19 Decl. ¶¶ 8, 9.) When Plaintiff’s counsel communicated that it was willing to continue 20 negotiations, Defendant’s representative stated, “we will get back to you.” (Id. ¶ 10.)
21 The employees started striking on March 9, 2023.

22 The complaint also alleges that Defendant has failed to comply with the grievance 23 process under the CBA which requires arbitration of any disputes that arise under the 24 CBA. (Dkt. No. 1, Compl. ¶ 20.) Instead of proceeding with the grievance under the 25 CBA, Defendant submitted a ULP with the NLRB without articulating any specific 26 actions or conduct by Plaintiff and has refused to present Plaintiff with a grievance or 27 details of its ULP dispute as mandated by Section 11.1 of the CBA. (Id. ¶ 21.) Plaintiff 28 seeks an injunction against Defendant from continuing with its planned strike activity and

1 requiring Defendant to adhere to the grievance procedure in the CBA that culminates in 2 arbitration. (Id. ¶¶ 31, 32.)

3 Discussion

4 The purpose of a TRO is to preserve the status quo before a preliminary injunction 5 hearing may be held; its provisional remedial nature is designed merely to prevent 6 irreparable loss of rights prior to judgment. Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Brotherhood of 7 Teamsters & Auto Truck Drivers, 415 U.S. 423, 439 (1974). The legal standard that 8 applies to a motion for a TRO is the same as a motion for a preliminary injunction. See 9 Stuhlbarg Int'l Sales Co. v. John D. Brush & Co., 240 F.3d 832, 839 n. 7 (9th Cir. 2001).
10 To obtain a TRO or preliminary injunction, the moving party must show: (1) a likelihood 11 of success on the merits; (2) a likelihood of irreparable harm to the moving party in the 12 absence of preliminary relief; (3) that the balance of equities tips in the moving party's 13 favor; and (4) that an injunction is in the public interest. Winter v. Natural Res. Def.
14 Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). Injunctive relief is “an extraordinary remedy that 15 may only be awarded upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief,” 16 Winter, 555 U.S. at 22, and the moving party bears the burden of meeting all four Winter
17 prongs. See DISH Network Corp. v. FCC, 653 F.3d 771, 776-77 (9th Cir. 2011).

18 Plaintiff argues likelihood of success on the merits, likelihood of irreparable harm 19 and balance of equities weigh in its favor in support of its motion; however, Defendant 20 only challenges the likelihood of success on the merits.

21 A. Likelihood of Success on the Merit

22 1. Norris-Laguardia Act

23 “The Norris-LaGuardia Act [“NLA”] contains severe strictures against the 24 issuance of injunctions in cases involving or growing out of labor disputes.” Matson
25 Plastering Co., Inc. v. Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons Int'l Ass'n, AFL-CIO, 26 Plasterers Local Union No. 295, 633 F.2d 1307, 1308 (9th Cir. 1980) (citation omitted).
27 It provides that “[n]o court of the United States . . . shall have jurisdiction to issue any . . .
28 temporary or permanent injunction in a case involving or growing out of a labor dispute,

1 except in strict conformity with the provisions of this Act.” 29 U.S.C. § 101. Section 2 113(c) defines “labor dispute” to include “any controversy concerning terms or 3 conditions of employment.” 29 U.S.C. § 113(c). The United States Supreme Court “has 4 consistently given the anti-injunction provisions of the Norris-LaGuardia Act a broad 5 interpretation, recognizing exceptions only in limited situations where necessary to 6 accommodate the Act to specific federal legislation or paramount congressional policy.”
7 Jacksonville Bulk Terminals, Inc. v. Int’l Longshoremen’s Ass’n, 457 U.S. 702, 708 8 (1982).

9 2. Boys Market Exception to the NLA

10 In Boys Market, the Supreme Court carved out a “narrow” exception to the anti-11 injunction provision of the NLA permitting a court to grant injunctive relief against a 12 strike “only with the situation in which a collective-bargaining contract contains a 13 mandatory grievance adjustment or arbitration procedure.” Boys Market, Inc. v. Retail 14 Clerks Union, Local 770, 398 U.S. 235, 253 (1970). In Boys Markets, the union 15 demanded that supervisory employees stop performing tasks claimed by the union to be 16 union work. Id. at 239. When the employer did not agree, the union struck. Id. Because 17 “there [was] no dispute that the grievance in question was subject to adjustment and 18 arbitration under the collective-bargaining agreement and that the petitioner was ready to 19 proceed with arbitration at the time an injunction against the strike was sought and 20 obtained”, the Court ruled that the union could be enjoined from striking over a dispute 21 which it was bound to arbitrate. Id. at 254. Boys Markets overruled *Sinclair*⁴ and held 22 that, taking into consideration the NLA’s anti-injunction provisions and the strong federal 23 policy favoring arbitration, an exception to the NLA must be recognized in cases where

26
27 ⁴ Sinclair Refining Co. v. Atkinson, 370 U.S. 195 (1962), held that the Norris-LaGuardia Act bars a 28 federal district court from enjoining a strike in breach of a collective-bargaining agreement, even where that agreement includes provisions for binding arbitration of the grievance concerning which the strike was called.

1 the employer seeks to enforce the union's contractual obligation to arbitrate grievances
2 instead of striking over them. Jacksonville Bulk Terminals, 457 U.S. at 708.

3 Subsequently, in Buffalo Forge, the Supreme Court refined the Boys Market 4 exception in a case where the strike was over a grievance that the union had not agreed to 5 arbitrate. Buffalo Forge Co. v. United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO, 428 U.S. 397, 6 408 (1976). In that case, the union employees engaged in a sympathy strike in support of 7 sister unions negotiating with the employer and, while the CBA included a no-strike 8 provision, it did not ban sympathy strikes. Id. at 405. Based on this, the parties disputed 9 whether the sympathy strike violated the no-strike provision.

10 The Court explained that because the CBA included an arbitration clause that 11 covered the meaning and application of the no-strike clause, the question whether the 12 sympathy strike “violated the no-strike clause, and the appropriate remedies if it did, 13 [were] subject to the agreed-upon dispute-settlement procedures of the contracts and 14 [were] ultimately issues for the arbitrator.” Id. The Court held that while the employer 15 was entitled to a court order directing the union to arbitrate, it did not warrant an 16 injunction pending a decision by the arbitrator because such an injunction “would cut 17 deeply into the policy of the Norris-LaGuardia Act and make the courts potential 18 participants in a wide range of arbitrable disputes under the many existing and future 19 collective-bargaining contracts.” Id. at 410-11. Distinguishing its case from Boys 20 Market, the Court, in Buffalo Forge, noted the Boys Market exception to be a “narrow 21 one” concerning a dispute subject to the grievance and arbitration clauses, and “it was 22 also clear that the strike violated the no-strike clause accompanying the arbitration 23 provisions.” Id. at 406; see Jacksonville Bulk Terminals, Inc., 457 U.S. at 709 (Buffalo
24 Forge held that “the Boys Markets exception does not apply when only the question 25 whether the strike violates the no-strike pledge, and not the dispute that precipitated the 26 strike, is arbitrable under the parties' collective-bargaining agreement.”).

27 Afterwards, the Ninth Circuit, in Matson, acknowledged the Boys Market
28 exception, but explained that the Court, in Buffalo Forge, highlighted that the “district

1 court had no jurisdiction to consider the merits of the underlying dispute over the proper
2 interpretation of the contract. The district court's jurisdiction in Buffalo Forge was limited 3 to deciding whether the dispute over contract interpretation was arbitrable under the 4 bargaining agreement.” Matson Plastering Co., Inc., 633 F.2d at 1308. In Matson, the 5 parties disputed over whether the union's strike was barred by the no-strike clause of the 6 bargaining agreement. Specifically, the employer and the union disputed whether the 7 employer's refusal to pay an assessment imposed against the union for late payment of 8 contributions fell under the express exception to the no-strike clause reserving the right to 9 strike for non-payment of such contributions. Id. at 1309. Relying on Buffalo Forge, the 10 Ninth Circuit held that the district court had no jurisdiction to issue an injunction. Id.

11 Therefore, for the Boys Market exception to the Norris-LaGuardia Act to apply, 12 there must be an “undisputed contractual obligation [1] not to strike and [2] to submit to 13 binding arbitration.” Matson Plastering Co., Inc., 633 F.2d at 1308.

14 Plaintiff argues that the Boys Market exception to the NLA applies in this case
15 because the CBA includes a no-strike clause and includes a grievance/arbitration 16 provision which it is willing and able to submit to. (Dkt. No. 4 at 7-8.) Defendant 17 responds that the exception does not apply because the no-strike contractual provision is 18 disputed and the underlying pension issue is not arbitrable. (Dkt. No. 7 at 13-15; 16-18.)

19 a. Whether the Underlying Pension Plan Issues are Undisputedly
20 Arbitrable

21 Plaintiff asserts that the grievance and arbitration provisions of the CBA are broad 22 governing all disputes arising from the terms of the CBA and covers the termination of 23 the pension plan as provided under Section 15 of the CBA. (Dkt. No. 14 at 4-5; see Dkt.
24 No. 4 at 7.) Defendant maintains that there is a dispute because the pension plan 25 grievances underlying the strike are non-arbitrable extra-contract disputes such that the 26 Boys Market exception does not apply. (Dkt. No. 7 at 18.)

27 An arbitration agreement requiring arbitration of any dispute “arising out of or 28 relating to” the agreement is “broad and far reaching.” See Chiron Corp. v. Ortho

1 Diagnostic Sys., Inc., 207 F.3d 1126, 1131 (9th Cir. 2000). Particularly in the labor 2 context, there is a congressional policy “in favor of settlement of disputes by the parties 3 through the machinery of arbitration” and “[a]n order to arbitrate the particular grievance 4 should not be denied unless it may be said with positive assurance that the arbitration 5 clause is not susceptible of an interpretation that covers the asserted dispute. Doubts 6 should be resolved in favor of coverage.” United Steelworkers of America v. Warrior &
7 Gulf Navigation Co., 363 U.S. 574, 582-83 (1960). The “arbitral forum is the primary 8 arena for the settlement of labor disputes.” United Steelworkers of America v. N.L.R.B., 9 530 F.2d 266, 273 (3d Cir. 1976). There is a “well-known presumption of arbitrability of 10 labor disputes.” Gateway Coal Co. v. United Mine Workers of America, 414 U.S. 368, 11 377 (1974).

12 The parties do not dispute that the CBA includes a mandatory grievance 13 adjustment or arbitration procedure; however, the parties dispute whether the underlying 14 grievances giving rise to the strike are arbitrable. See Matson, 633 F.2d at 1308 (the 15 district court's jurisdiction in Buffalo Forge was limited to deciding whether the dispute 16 over contract interpretation was arbitrable under the bargaining agreement.)

17 Section 11 of the CBA provides that “[a]ll grievances, including any and all 18 matters of controversy, dispute or disagreement of any kind or character existing between 19 the parties and arising out of or in any way involving the interpretation or application of 20 the terms of this Agreement must be presented to the Employer in writing” (Dkt.
21 No. 1-2, Compl., Ex. A, CBA § 11.1.) Only after the grievance procedure fails, then the 22 grievance may be submitted to arbitration. (Id. § 11.2.) The CBA language of “any and 23 all matters of controversy, dispute or disagreement of any kind or character” and “arising 24 out of or in any way” are to be broadly construed and are far reaching. See Chiron
25 Corp., 207 F.3d at 1131.

26 The CBA provision, in this case, addressing the termination of the pension plan 27 provides “[e]ffective December 31, 2021, the pension plan froze and will move to 28

1 termination. In place of the pension plan is an enhanced 401(k) for year-round
2 employees. . . .” (Dkt. No. 1-2, Compl., Ex. A, CBA ¶ 15.)

3 The Union identifies several reasons for its strike. It relies on the “concern that 4 Spreckels had withheld information in initial bargaining in 2021 and/or made choices
5 about how to terminate the plan that were not negotiated”. (Dkt. No. 7-1, Walter Decl. ¶ 6 15.) It also raises allegations that Plaintiff’s delay in executing the termination of the 7 pension plan in 2022, when the CBA was in effect, caused the significant decline in the 8 worth of the employees’ defined benefits. (Id. ¶¶ 14, 15.) Further, it asserts that the 9 strike was triggered by Plaintiff’s “repeated failure to adequately respond to the Union’s 10 concerns about the process [Plaintiff] had followed in terminating the pension plan”. (Id.
11 ¶ 15.) Specifically, the Union argues that Plaintiff failed to explain the delay in 12 terminating the plan which may have caused the value of the employees’ benefits to 13 decrease significantly. (Id. ¶¶ 14, 15.)

14 Based on these reasons for striking, Defendant maintains that there was no 15 grievance to submit related to Section 15 because the plan was already frozen before the 16 effective date of the CBA and the phrase “will move to termination” does not provide any 17 source of a dispute to be brought to arbitration. It is Plaintiff’s position that because the 18 grievance/arbitration provision applies to the “application” of Section 15, which includes 19 termination, it covers the grievance but does not address whether it applies to the CBA 20 negotiation conduct in 2021.

21 The Court recognizes there are two separate periods of time encompassed by 22 Defendant’s pension plan grievance. The first involves the alleged misrepresentations 23 made during negotiations of the CBA to induce the employees to terminate the pension 24 plan in 2021, when the CBA was not yet in effect, and the second relate to actions taken 25 to terminate the pension plan after the CBA went into effect. The Court finds that a good 26 faith dispute exists whether the 2021 negotiations are subject to the CBA arbitral process.
27 As to the 2022 actions in terminating the pension plan, after the Union raised issues
28 regarding the method of Plaintiff’s pension plan termination, Plaintiff’s initial response

1 was that it, too, believed that the issue was not covered by the CBA. Plaintiff stated it 2 was not required to engage in further effects bargaining over the pension plan termination 3 since it had been negotiated in early 2022 and the Union knew the potential impacts at 4 that time, and that the grievance was untimely. (Dkt. No. 7-3, Ex. A; Dkt. No. 7-4, Ex.
5 B.) By its initial push back, Plaintiff appears to have believed the grievance fell outside 6 the scope of the CBA. Given these circumstances, it cannot be said that “there [was] no 7 dispute that the grievance in question was subject to adjustment and arbitration under the 8 collective-bargaining agreement.” See Boys Market, Inc., 398 U.S. at 254. Accordingly, 9 the Boys Market exception does not apply to the facts of this case and the Court lacks the 10 authority to grant the Plaintiff’s request for an injunction.

11 While the NLA prohibits an injunction in this case, the Court finds that the 12 disputes between the parties are subject to the grievance and arbitration process so that an 13 arbitrator can decide whether any or all of the grievances between the parties are subject 14 to arbitration.

15 b. Whether the No-Strike Provision is Undisputed

16 The Court further finds that there is a dispute whether the Union’s ULP strike 17 violates the CBA’s no-strike clause. Plaintiff argues that the no-strike provision 18 unequivocally bars the employees from striking. (Dkt. No. 4 at 7-8.) Relying on Mastro
19 Plastics Corp. v. N.L.R.B., 350 U.S. 270, 280 (1956). Defendant responds that there is a 20 real dispute whether the ULP strike⁵ falls under the no-strike provision of the CBA.
21 (Dkt. No. 7 at 14-15.)

22 Mastro Plastics involved a petition to enforce an NLRB’s order where the 23 employer had engaged in “a flagrant example of interference by the employers with the 24 expressly protected right of their employees to select their own bargaining 25 representative.” Mastro Plastics Corp., 350 U.S. at 278. In the case, the employees went 26
27

28 ⁵ The parties do not dispute that the strike is an unfair practices labor strike.

1 on strike after the company discharged an employee for failing to transfer his allegiance
2 to the union it preferred and then discharged 76 other striking employees. Id. at 273, 275, 3 277. The bargaining agreement included a provision where “[t]he Union agree[d] that 4 during the term of this agreement, there shall be no interference of any kind with the 5 operations of the employers, or any interruptions or slackening of production of work by 6 any of its members. The Union further agree[d] to refrain from engaging in any strike or 7 work stoppage during the term of this agreement.” Id. at 281. After engaging in contract 8 interpretation, the Court held that the contract “did not waive the employees' right to 9 strike solely against the unfair labor practices of their employers” despite the “no strike” 10 provision in the agreement. Id. at 284. The NLRB “requires that a waiver must generally 11 be “clear and unmistakable.”” N.L.R.B. v. Southern California Edison Co., 646 F.2d 12 1352, 1364 (9th Cir. 1981).

13 The NLRB, subsequently, interpreted the right to strike under Mastro Plastics as 14 limited to disputes involving “serious” unfair labor practices, Arlan's Dep't Store of 15 Michigan, Inc., 133 N.L.R.B. 802 (1961) (interpreting Mastro Plastics that “only strikes 16 in protest against serious unfair labor practices should be held immune from general no-17 strike clauses.”), which the Ninth Circuit adopted in Servair, Inc. v. N.L.R.B., 726 F.2d 18 1435, 1441 (1984) (citing rule in Arlan's and stating “under the Mastro Plastics rationale, 19 we must determine whether the unfair labor practice was “serious.”). An unfair labor 20 practice is “serious” if it is “destructive of the foundation on which collective bargaining 21 must rest.” Servair, 726 F.2d at 1441 (quoting Mastro Plastics Corp., 350 U.S. at 281).
22 In Servair, the Ninth Circuit held that the NLRB’s determination, that the employer’s 23 repeated interference with its employees’ selection of a bargaining representative, 24 including the discharge of an employee, was a “serious” unfair labor practice under 25 Mastro Plastics, was not arbitrary. Id. at 1442.

26 According to Defendant, the ULP strike, in this case, is not subject to the no-strike 27 clause in the CBA because it does not contain a “clear and unmistakable” waiver of the 28 right to engage unfair labor practice strike relying on Mastro Plastics. (Dkt. No. 7 at 12-

1 13.) Therefore, under Buffalo Forge, because it is disputed whether the strike is barred 2 by the no-strike provision, no injunction may issue. In reply, Plaintiff argues that the 3 ULP strike is subject to the no-strike clause because Mastro Plastics' holding only 4 applies to "serious" unfair labor practices which is not the case here. (Dkt. No. 14 at 2.)

5 The no-strike provision states, "[d]uring the term of this Agreement, there shall be 6 no cessation[,] interruption or delay of work or other action by the employees or the 7 Union which impairs the Employer's operations or financial condition or affects the 8 distribution of its products, including without limitation, strikes (including sympathy 9 strikes), work stoppages, slowdowns, picketing boycotts, or corporate campaigns. During 10 the term of this Agreement there shall be no lockout by the Employer." (Dkt. No. 1-2, 11 Ex. A at 28.) Moreover, the CBA provides that "[a]ll grievances, including any and all 12 matters of controversy, dispute or disagreement of any kind or character existing between 13 the parties and arising out of or in any way involving the interpretation or application of 14 the terms of this Agreement" are subject to the grievance/arbitration provision. (See Dkt.
15 No. 1-2, Compl., Ex. A, CBA § 11.1.) Therefore, the no-strike provision, Section 16.9 of 16 the CBA, is a term of the Agreement subject to the grievance/arbitration process and 17 whether the work stoppage falls under the no-strike provision of the CBA must be 18 resolved through the grievance/arbitration process. See Buffalo Forge, 428 U.S. at 408.

19 Further, whether Plaintiff engaged in an unfair labor practice and whether it was 20 "serious" within the meaning of Mastro Plastics is also disputed but an issue subject to 21 the NLRB's exclusive jurisdiction. See San Diego Building Trades Council v. Garmon, 22 359 U.S. 236, 245 (1959) ("[w]hen an activity is arguably subject to § 7 or § 8 of the Act, 23 the States as well as the federal courts must defer to the exclusive competence of the 24 National Labor Relations Board if the danger of state interference with national policy is 25 to be averted."). The NLRB has primary, exclusive jurisdiction over unfair labor

1 practices as provided under the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA”)⁶ while an 2 arbitrator has the authority given to him or her by the CBA. See George Day Const. Co.,
3 Inc. v. United Brothers of Carpenters and Joinders of America, Local 354, 722 F.2d 4 1471, 1474, 1480 (9th Cir. 1984) (“issues arising under sections 7 and 8 of the NLRA are 5 within the exclusive competence of the Board” and “arbitrator's jurisdiction is rooted in 6 the agreement of the parties”); see N.L.R.B. v. Northeast Oklahoma City Mfg. Co., 631 7 F.2d 669, 675 (10th Cir. 1980) (“Whether a Section 8(a)(5) violation, if found, rises to 8 the level of a “serious” unfair labor practice, for example, requires an interpretation of the 9 Act, not of the contract. Such a determination is within the exclusive province of the 10 Board, not of an arbitrator.”).

11 Conduct may be a violation of an “arbitrable contract” as well as “an unfair labor 12 practice” which raises the issue of concurrent jurisdiction. Id. at 1481 (recognizing the 13 problems arising from concurrent jurisdiction over acts constituting simultaneously a 14 breach of contract and an unfair labor practice). An arbitrator may make a determination 15 on whether an employer’s conduct constitutes an unfair labor practice and the NLRB may 16 interpret a CBA, but ultimately, the interpretation of the CBA falls on the arbitrator and a 17 determination on whether conduct constitutes an unfair labor practice falls on the Board.
18 See Int’l Longshore and Warehouse Union v. N.L.R.B., 978 F.3d 625, 640 (9th Cir. 2020) 19 (“[a]lthough the Board has occasion to interpret collective-bargaining agreements in the 20 context of unfair labor practice adjudication, the Board is neither the sole nor the primary 21 source of authority in such matters.”); Stephenson v. N.L.R.B., 550 F.2d 535, 537 (9th 22 Cir. 1977) (“case law is settled . . . that the Board has considerable discretion to accept an 23 arbitrator's award and decline to exercise authority over an alleged unfair labor 24 practice.”).
